

Google / Regional Office / Washington, DC

27,680 sf

/Programming
/Schematic design
/Design development
/Construction documents
/Contract administration

Google's Washington, DC office provides an environmentally conscious, fun, modern office environment.

Google believes that all square footage is to be used at all times, so almost all spaces are multi-functional. Huddle Rooms easily become 2-3 person offices, Phone Booths can be used for interviews, and the Tech Café can be used for "Tech Talks". The Main Conference Room is separated from the Secured Reception by roll-up garage doors that lift and open to create one large open area for conferencing, training, or entertaining.

Team collaboration and sharing of ideas can occur while meeting in one of the conference rooms or informal meeting areas, eating a free catered lunch, competing in the Game Room, lounging on a couch, or sitting in beanbag chairs. Google is the ultimate in user-friendly space.

