When looking for new office space, Studley's team selected a prominent suite in a premier Class A building. A neutral palette complemented with rich tones of chocolate, gold, and black creates an elegant, confident image.

The reception area and main conference room, public areas that overlook and were designed to be visual extensions of the building atrium and elevator lobby, project a sophisticated look and are accented with maple wood, stainless steel, limestone, and textured fabric panels.

The employee work areas continue the design scheme, only with materials that are more durable and economical. Natural light flows into the interior spaces through the use of frosted glass doors and clerestories.
