A crisp clean palette of warm grays, white marble, stainless steel, and accents of crimson welcomes you as you enter TMG's new 7th floor headquarters space located at 1129 20th Street in Washington, DC. The goal of the design was to keep the palette simple, using few materials and focusing on the architectural details while infusing TMG's brand throughout the space.

The main design objective for the office space was to create an open efficient studio that would promote collaboration and creative success while retaining privacy and intimacy. The latter was accomplished by bisecting the studio space with copy room pods. Four-foot-wide sidelights at all enclosed offices maintain a visual connection to the adjacent studio while allowing all workstations to benefit from the natural light projected throughout the space. DBI also designed a media-editing studio for TMG to record both audio and visual content.
